

The Teaching and Learning Academy

The Teaching and Learning Academy is a series of professional development workshops for Mesa Faculty and Staff. The Academy will host monthly workshops on the third Friday of each month (beginning in February). Workshops will be held in H-119 from 10AM-2PM. Attendance is limited to 20 participants for the February, March, and April workshops; enroll through the flex workshop process.

January Convocation--Habits of Mind Workshop

This workshop is designed to start us thinking about our assessment processes and how we can further utilize assessment results in student learning.

February 21, 2014 Assessing Our Assessments

A best practices presentation and discussion. How are our SLO assessments relative to what we are doing in our classroom or office?

March 21, 2014 Technology in the Classroom--New and Brilliant Ideas

A best practices presentation and discussion. What defines the use of technology? Non-traditional methods of integrating technology into every discipline's classroom.

April 25, 2014 Bridging the Gap

A conversation between faculty and students. How to keep relevant with students who are tech savvy and communicate differently.

May 16, 2014 Full day, Multi-discipline, Multi-college Conference

An opportunity for you to host your colleagues from SD County Community Colleges. You define the content of your sessions--what do you as a Department/Program want to discuss? This can be a best practices session, an SLO/assessment session, or just a chance to meet your colleagues and start a discussion. Let us know if you'd like to participate, and we'll send out the invites and co-ordinate the event.

What other topics would you like to see in future workshops--email Kris at kclark@sdccd.edu with your suggestions.
