Chemistry Peer Mentor Safiya Sayd

My name is Safiya Sayd. I am in my second year at Mesa college and plan to transfer this fall semester to the University of California San Diego as a molecular and cell biology major. I then plan to attend medical school, more specifically the Stanford school of medicine.

I've always been interested in the medical field and it's my biggest dream to become an accomplished doctor.

I religiously go for tutoring even if I don't need it because I learned by being a stem major that you need an environment with people of similar backgrounds to help you further in your journey. Chemistry is my favorite subject and I hope to make it yours as well!

A little about me is I'm known to be talkative and energetic. I love running long distances and just about anything that keeps me active. I also have a really bad sugar tooth which I choose to believe is ok because it's "balanced" with how active I am.
