Guidance, Resource, and Support for Parenting Students Club	jaleman@sdccd.edu	The Purpose of this club is to garner community within the parenting student population. All students who have dependance are welcome to join. Parenting students comprise ~25% of the college student population nationwide, yet we are grossly underserved in the higher education system. The lack of guidance, resources, and support we face while navigating the community college system only compounds the everyday barriers we face as parents. As a result, more than half of us will drop out before attaining a degree. Overwhelmed with the responsibilities of fulfilling our parental, financial, and academic duties, we often don't have the time, physical or mental energy, nor the resource to participate in campus social events, tutoring, workshops, student government, study groups; the list goes on. This leads to us missing out on valuable information and opportunities which results in a solitary educational experience. Unfortunately, we miss out on the "community" aspect of the community college experience. Our unwavering focus, drive, and purpose is aimed passionately at the betterment of our circumstance for the sake of our children and families. Navigating the system is needlessly difficult and isolating. This must change. We need not sacrifice furthering our education purely due to the lack of support. Developing a parent community that understands your struggles and knows how to successfully navigate the system to ensure you get your grasp on that degree is imperative. The purpose of this Club is to create such a community in which parenting students can guide, support and share available resources with one another resulting in everyone having a better chance at succeeding. We must leave Mesa College better than we found it for the incoming parents who have an uphill battle ahead of them. Together, we will level the playing field in higher education for ourselves and each other.	Lyric Bogard	Johanna Aleman	jaleman@sdccd.edu	Leticia Diaz	ldiaz@sdccd.edu
